From Goats to Growth: Empowering Women in Behdwa

In Behdwa village of Alirajpur (M.P.), a quiet revolution is taking shape through the Livelihood Project of Model Village Trust. The Goat Rearing Project began with just 12 families, each receiving two goats. The model was simple yet powerful — every year, half of the newborn kids would be shared with another needy family, creating a chain of empowerment.

Today, the initiative has expanded to 20 families, with the goat population growing from 24 to 58, including 21 healthy kids. More than numbers, it has given women a steady source of income, improved nutrition, and renewed confidence. Once confined to household struggles, they are now active contributors to family welfare and children's education.

Behdwa's goat project shows how small steps in livelihood support can spark lasting community transformation — turning goats into growth, and hope into reality.

In response to this crisis, Human Welfare Trust had activated its Community Kitchen under Project Ehsas, located near Kalindi Kunj Metro Station. Since early September, the kitchen had been preparing and distributing over 800 freshly cooked meals every day. These meals were served at the relief camp in Sarvodaya Bal Vidyalaya, Madanpur Khadar, and extended to shelter sites across Kanchan Kunj up to Zaitpur.

Human Welfare Trust remains committed to continuing such humanitarian efforts whenever and wherever the need arises, ensuring that no family is left without support in times of crisis.
